DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 22-77, as amended, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention, for the reasons given in the previous action, hereby incorporated by reference. As stated in the previous rejection, the exact method by which the voltage is reduced is not clearly defined. Rather than being a question of the scope of the claims, the claim fail to particularly point out and distinctly claim the inventive means by which the voltage reduction is achieved other than what is inherently produced by all transistors of the type described.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

Claims 22-77 are further rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Tobita. The reference to Tobita appears to show the inventive process by which an initial voltage is reduced by the amount of a threshold voltage of a field effect transistor, and subsequently applied to a well surrounding the transistor and to an external circuit.

For example, comparing applicant's claim 22 method with the description of Tobita's Fig. 7 embodiment, it is seen that Tobita also applies a voltage to the first source/drain and gate of transistor Q31 at node (30) and that a voltage reduced by the threshold voltage of the transistor is provided at a second source/drain of the transistor and to the well bounding the transistor, as claimed. See, also, the discussion at col. 14, lines 1-15 of Tobita, as well.

The output voltage at node (2) of Tobita would also be applied to another circuit element or to an additional transistor as shown in Fig. 9 of Tobita, with transistor Q5 outputting to transistor Q1, and the surrounding well.

The Tobita reference also shows the various claimed modifications to the basic circuit arrangement described above, and specifically recognizes the advantages of providing a reduced voltage by utilizing the inherent reduction of input voltage by the threshold voltage of the transistor to which it is applied. All or the claimed method of operating steps, insofar as understood, would appear to be met by the Tobita reference.
